2. Pequeno texto introdutório que deve refletir, o enquadramento da UC proposta na oferta curricular da NOVA FCSH, bem como, o carácter inovador ou a complementaridade com outras UC's existentes. Understanding morality and emotion has occupied scholars since the days of Plato and Aristotle, and this study has become increasingly interdisciplinary over the past few decades. This course will engage in a multidisciplinary voyage through historical, literary, philosophical, sociological, artistic, anthropological and biological debates concerning this relationship, challenging self-containing disciplinary views on the nature and importance of this symbiosis. It encourages an integrative analysis that covers various methodological angles (mixing theoretical and experimental approaches), ensuring careful and heterogeneous reflections. The treatment and interconnection of diverse perspectives is in line with NOVA FCSH's response to the evolving landscape within the Humanities, and means the course is designed for students from a wide variety of fields and backgrounds.

16. Objetivos da unidade curricular/Learning objectives

Through a multidisciplinary analysis of the concepts of emotion and morality, it is intended to promote a greater awareness of notions of identity and selfhood, demonstrating how different layers of humanity and interaction affect and define us. This will encourage a better understanding of our lives, actions and reactions, as a complex ecosystem that not only adapts (with varying degrees of success) to the environment in which it operates, but transforms it, and is irrevocably transformed by it. Some objectives include:

- survey a historiography on theories of emotion and morality;
- discuss multidisciplinary perspectives on this relationship encouraging dialogues between fields of knowledge which do not usually intercommunicate, providing students with teaching by experts;
- promote and develop critical and interpretive thinking skills regarding this symbiosis anchored on various sources, dimensions and stimuli;
- explore practical/experimental approaches to these debates transversally to all sessions in order to demonstrate how a better understanding of these dynamics can impact on the way we perceive ourselves and others, ultimately benefiting social relationships.

20. Conteúdo da unidade curricular/Syllabus (máx. 200 palavras):

The self, understood as an organism with a body, memories, emotions, desires, values, and culture specific narratives, is a complex ecosystem. This specificity of layers of experience impacts deeply on the way we perceive (or want to be perceived) ourselves and others, physically, morally and emotionally. It is through our emotions that we build social identities, judge right from wrong, place value on varied phenomena, and feel motivated to (re)act according to shared, collective values. We are what matters to us.
